The New Democratic Rebellion.

Two distinctive propositions underlie and get possession of it by violence. This is the real platform. The rest is mere ad captandum. These purposes are not concealed in the platform. In deed, those who framed it made them prominent, believing apparently that they would thereby strengthen their party. They believed the West ripe for repudiation, and they know the South is ripe for revolution. Nor are they concealed by Democratic newspapers and orators. The La Crosse Democrat, which truly reflects the sentiments of more Democrats in the North and West than any one newspaper therein published, declares boldly for undisguised repudiation. The more politic of Democratic leaders in the West, like Mr. Pendleton, sugar-coat the pill and call it redeeming the bonds in "lawful money"-proposing to set the presses at work and print enough of Even they do not attempt a very deep disguise: for this lawful money being Government promises to pay, their scheme does not extend so far as to embrace any plan for its redemption; whence we must infer they do not mean it shall ever be redeemed at all. And this result will be all the more easily brought about by the fact that irredeemable promises to pay would become so utterly valueless that no more account would be taken of them than of so much waste paper. Of course the revolutionary proposiother or the extinguishment of the Government. It is the issue, therefore, Democratic, they will claim that those print elsewhere a masterly article from the Detroit Post, reciting some of the evidences of this revolutionary purpose. No one can examine the evidence before the country and doubt that such a purpose is actually entertained by the party which calls itself Democratic. There has been so much threatening by that party since active hostillities ceased that people generally have come to regard dangers to elect him, according to their count, then they will claim it by force, if there is any carry in the North, would be enough to elect him, according to their count, then they will claim it by force, if there is any length of 1860, or examine the newspaper files of 1860, or examine the newspaper files of 1860, or examine the newspaper files of that year, and he will find nothing to the party will calm to the party will come out and please that people dependence of the past few years have one of the past few years have one of the past few years have one to regard dangers lightly? Let any one recall the events of the past few years have one to regard dangers lightly? Let any one recall the events of 1860, or examine the newspaper files of that year, and he will find nothing of that year, and he will find nothing to the past few years have one of 1860, or examine the newspaper files of that year, and he will find nothing to the past few years have no relief unless the Democratic Convention, and the proposed of the past few years have one of 1860, or examine the newspaper files of 1860, or examine the newspaper files of the past few years have no relief unless the Democratic Convention of the year. The Democratic Convention of the year, and he will find nothing the party will come out and please filed that he should be an early and certain yielding the will have the same than the should be an early and certain yielding the will have the head of the past in the declarations of the Democratic press, or in the speeches of Democratic leaders, bolder, more threatening or more revolutionary than we find to day in the official and authoritative utterances of that same party. People believed then that the threatened secession was mere bluster. Yet it was not. We shall be worse than fools to deceive ourselves in the same way The same men who threatened secession then threaten revolution now. They believed in 1860 that enough people in the NorthernStates sympathized with them to make the Confederacy a success. They were mistaken. Just so soon as it was realized that secession meant war, the Northern people were practically a unit. They threaten now the South on the basis of emancipation, because they believe there are enough people in the North, Joining with an united South, who will sustain them in it and make their revolution a success. It the dire purpose is pushed to extremity, these rebel leaders will find themselves mistaken again. If measures of war should again become necessary the North and West must of necessity consolidate again just as they did before. The exigencies of war would compel the Northern States to make the power of the dominant party would be more rigidly suppressed than before, for the experience of the rebellion taught lessons that would not need be learned again. There would be no Horatio Seymours at the head of States, stirring up insurrections at home, no Knights of the Golden Circle organizing and drilling behind our armies; but all traifors and treasonable organizations at home would be regamizations at home would served to have a supplement of the count to the several States. AFOOT. Food for Serious Reflection.

From the Detroit Post,

The Democratic plot for another civil war continually grows in magnitude. Suggested by Frank Blair, indorsed by Seymour, and perfected by Andrew Johnson, it has "fired the hearts" of the Southern rebel leaders, who are preparing their followers for its execu-The perfected plot as laid down by Andrew Johnson, in his last veto message, is that the legal votes of the reconstructed States must not be counted by Congress, or the Democrats will resist; but that the only votes from those States to be counted are the white votes. Mr. Johnson declares that the reconstructed State governments "are that kind of "money" for the purpose, illegitimate and of no validity whatever; and, in that view, the votes cast in the States for President and Vice President, in pursuance of acts passed since the 4th of March, 1867, and in obedience to the so-called reconstruction acts of Congress, cannot be legally received and counted; while the only votes in those

BAD TASTE

In the mouth in the morning is one of the symptoms of a billious condition or disordered state of the liver, and should not, for a single day, be neglected, as it is but the premonitory symptom of a train of evils and the very seeds of disease. Procure at once Roback's Blood Pills, administer them according to the directions accompanying each box, and the difficulty and danger of disease will at once be removed.
